New Waste Pits study calls for removal

EPA guidelines for toxic sites examined

HIGHLANDS -- About 60 interested residents of the Highlands and Channelview are attended a briefing last Wednesday evening, held at the San Jacinto Community Center in Highlands.

The meeting was hosted by Jackie Young, environmental activist with the San Jacinto River Coalition, and TexasTogether.

Young had contracted with an instructor of hers, Dr. Kathleen Garland, to prepare a report on EPA guidelines for dealing with toxic waste sites, as applied to other locations around the United States.

Garland teaches at the University of Houston Clear Lake, and is a Geologist and Environmental Management Expert.

Garland worked from existing data, on how the federal EPA had dealt with other toxic Superfund sites similar to the San Jacinto Waste Pits. Young's hypothesis is that if the cases are similar, and EPA has required removal of toxic materials, then they should call for a similar solution in the San Jacinto River, therefore treating this in a similar method as others.

Young said that a final decision will be made by the EPA this spring, since the National Remedy Review Board is meeting in April, and announced in a Final Report in September 2015.

This approaching deadline has caused Young to increase her public push for citizens to be involved that in addition to the EPA determination of remedial action, there are also two lawsuits pending against the

County Attorney appeals court rulings in Waste Pits Case

Harris County Attorney Vince Ryan today appealed trial court rulings in the case involving the contamination of the San Jacinto River.

County Attorney Ryan filed a Notice of Appeal in the case of Harris County and the State of Texas v. International Paper.

The case involves the contamination of the river by International Paper's predecessor Champion Paper in the 1960s, when Champion's Pasadena Mill disposed of dioxin-laced paper mill waste in pits dug on the river bank. The waste leaked into the river for more than four decades, where it has contaminated the water, the sediment and the fish.

The case was tried in October 2014, with a group of companies settling with Harris County and the State for $29.2 million before the jury returned its verdict.

The County is appealing on the grounds that the jury was not permitted to hear key evidence from experts and witnesses who live and work near the river. The trial court excluded reports from the Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Department of State Health Services about International Paper's pollution of the San Jacinto River and endangerment of the people of Harris County with dioxin exposure. Harris County is also appealing the trial court's instructions to the jury that took many of the factual issues out of the jury's hands.

"Because of the numerous rulings at trial, Harris County did not get to present its case to the jury," County Attorney Ryan said. "We respectfully disagree with those rulings, and will be appealing on behalf of the people of Harris County."

Among other findings, the court ruled as a matter of law that once the waste was pumped into the pits, it was no longer Champion's waste despite the fact that the company hired to dispose of the waste also disclaimed ownership of the waste as well. The court also held the jury could not hear evidence that Champion had done the same with another site in Texas.

Panama Canal talk by Bill Diehl

GALENA PARK -- Participants in the CIP heard industry reports of safety and emissions last month, but they also heard two interesting talks by industry leaders.

Derrick Bockius, plant manager of the new Kinder-

BOCKIUS, K-M

Morgan facility in Galena Park reported that the plant was now on line, and producing about 50,000 gallons/day. This is Unit 1, and Unit 2 will go on line later this year, he said. The distillate product is being sent to local Galena Park companies, and to barges for export. Bockius said that the city of Galena Park should realize about $4 million yearly from this new plant.

Capt. Bill Diehl, president of the Greater Houston Port Bureau, made a detailed slide presentation on the status of the new Panama Canal work, and explained how it would affect commerce in the Houston Port area.

CAPT. BILL DIEHL, USCG (RET) and President of the Port Bureau

The new canal is 50 miles long, he said, and has 3 locks at each end to raise or lower ships. Capacity will be 14,000 vessels per year, compared with current activity of 4000 per year in Los Angeles, and 8000 in Houston.

The new canal will be able to accommodate wider ships, now 13 containers wide but they will be 22 containers wide in the future. They are known as "PanaMax" Ships. Another way to gauge their size: current ships hold 4400 TEU (Tonnage Equivalent Units) and future ships will carry 12,000-14,000 TEU.

Diehl said East Harris county will need more highways and rail lines to accommodate the increase in ship cargo traffic when the canal opens, but they will not go through Galena Park.

Foundation surprises teachers with Innovative Teaching Grants

The wide eyed looks of surprise and faces lighting up with joy seemed to be the natural reaction among a select group of Channelview ISD teachers recently.

With noisemakers and cheers filling the hallways, the Channelview ISD Education Foundation made several teachers very happy as the organization handed out more than $14,000 in Innovative Teaching Grants during its "Surprise Patrol" on April 17.

"The opportunities that the Foundation is providing us through this grant is just amazing and open up a whole new world for our students," said Channelview High School art teacher Tamara Foster, who was awarded a $5,000 grant for an outdoor pottery lab. "Thanks to the generosity of the Foundation and the people who support it, we will be able to provide collegiate-level learning experiences for our students while they are still in high school."

Foundation board members and donors, school administrators, and Channelview High School cheerleaders and Channelettes dance team traveled by bus to present the grants.

Funds for the grants came from private donations from business and community members, as well as various individuals.

"One of the missions of the Channelview ISD Education Foundation is to provide teachers with the resources they need that helps learning come to life for students," CISD Foundation President Bill Hendrix said. "We are proud to play a part in helping make these opportunities become a reality."

This year's grant recipients included:

Amanda Kennington, Cobb Elementary. Grant Title: ACCELERATED Environment. Amount: $842.34

Summary: The goal of the project is to increase student and staff physical activity awareness through the use of a non-invasive instrument similar to pedometers (the accelerometer) providing instant feedback and possibly as a behavior modification tool within the physical education classroom. The tool will be used to set fitness challenges for all children (K-5). School staff may also benefit from the use of the technology to monitor and adjust their own physical fitness program.

Darlene Way, Aguirre Junior High. Grant Title: Project Focus. Amount: $2,657.04

Summary: Through equipping her classroom with stability yoga balls and open front desks for her classroom, this will help special needs and all students to focus by giving them an outlet for excessive energy through movement.

The special equipment will also help them to develop better posture as well. This method of learning has been proven effective among many educational experts.

Tamara Foster, Channelview High School. Grant Title: Alternative Firing and Finishing Processes for Clay. Amount: $5,000

Summary: Alternative firing processes are not new, but are an important part of the history and the future of ceramics as an art form. Current and past students of the ceramics program have been limited to electric kiln firing, only reading about other methods in textbooks. This grant would make the textbooks come to life.

Channelview ISD Education Foundation President Bill Hendrix congratulates Channelview High School art teacher Tamara Foster, who was the recipient of a $5,000 grant during the group's "Surprise Patrol" recently.

The grant will fund equipment to make Raku, Smoke Firing and Pit Firing accessible to every ceramics student, which will prepare them for a future working with clay, as well as an introduction to processes that will expand at the university level. This method will put equipment into place that will influence students' methods, techniques and thought processes for years to come.

Frances Bushnell, Aguirre Junior High. Grant Title: Increasing Engagement with Scientific Minds. Amount: $1,320

Summary: Science Starters is a tool for engaging enrichment, remediation and review for middle school students. This program provides a teacher-friendly process for teaching state standards using strategies that benefit all students. Science Starters is a series of 120 web-based, digital video lessons that break science into bite-sized chunks of instruction, which helps make the concepts easier to comprehend. This program helps education students in the area of foundational science concepts and to prepare students for state assessments, college readiness and future careers.

Dean Rogers, Joe Frank Campbell Learning Center. Grant Title: The Comics for Comprehension Project. Amount: $2,847.96

Summary: The goal of this project is to provide an ample amount of high-interest reading materials for struggling readers of all backgrounds. Graphic novels not only offer the traditional struggling reader a portal to the world of reading, it also extends this lifeline to second language learners. The project is designed to meet the developmental needs of diverse students with regard to literacy.

Kareen Neal, Channelview High School. Grant Title: Project Green Light. Amount: $2,158.59

Summary: The new versions of "green screen" for Media Productions students that were filming video give students expanded opportunities to be more creative and less restricted because of equipment. Older versions of green screen were cumbersome to set up for video shoots on locations outside of the classroom, plus required various types of lighting. With the new portable green screen, it can be easily transported to any location and can be used in any type of lighting. With this equipment, it allows the students to truly explore imaginations and talents.

The CISD Education Foundation was formed in 2012 as a 501c3 non-profit organization that benefits Channelview ISD students and staff by supporting activities not funded by tax dollars through the regular school budget. GALENA PARK

Hundreds attend Galena Park ISD Career Explosion

At North Shore Senior High School's Second Annual Career Explosion, GPISD student Laniko Harden inquires about future job opportunities at HydroChem.

The Galena Park ISD Career & Technical Education (CTE) Department hosted the second annual Career Explosion at North Shore Senior High School. More than 800 junior high and high school students attended. Laura Mann, GPISD Director of CTE stated, "Career Explosion was designed to expose students to a wide gamut of careers and professional business expectations and standards." Students were able to speak directly with volunteers from local business/industry on a variety of career opportunities, asking questions and interacting with individuals who work in the assorted fields. "This is what Career and Technical Education is all about - the school district working hand in hand with business and industry to prepare students for life after high school," Mann added.

Career Explosion featured 14 career clusters represented by nearly 40 companies, educational institutions and military branches. These clusters provided students in grades 8-12 an opportunity to gain further insight about their career pathways. Each student gained useful workforce experience and exposure, catapulting their career interests and professional awareness to the next level. Dr. Steve Horton, Executive Director of the Construction & Manufacturing Educational Foundation (CMEF) said, "Thank you for offering the opportunity for our volunteers to facilitate an information booth at the GPISD Career Explosion. Speaking to hundreds of students throughout the day about great careers in the Construction Industry is invaluable. The students were most respectful and quite attentive as they stopped by our booth to receive printed information and engage in conversation with Industrial and Commercial Construction Industry representatives." In addition to business and industry booths, students engaged in breakout sessions provided by Career & Technical Student Organizations (CTSO) and Workforce Solutions.

The breakout sessions included interviewing and resume critiques, social media presentations, and a professional business style (fashion) show. CTE Counselor Alicia Green noted, "The goal of Career Explosion was to ensure students gained meaningful experiences and exposure related to their career interests." For example, the interactive social media session was geared towards helping students become more aware of the impact today's posts might have on future job opportunities. Likewise, the interviewing and resume critique sessions provided students with time to interview with surrounding area business and industry representatives. Lastly, the style show provided students with a competitive edge in preparing for their next interview, job, or leadership position through delivering professional dress standards and expectations.

TEXAS
With Russell A. Graves

Texas
Independence

I am a Texan.

From the time I was a small boy I can remember my parents hauling all over the state showing me culturally and historically important sites and teaching me how to be a Texan.

As I think back those are happy times.

Fast forward thirty years and now I am a dad myself, and like my mom and dad, I think it's important for me to share those same lessons with my kids and instill in them, the same pride of place which was taught to me three decades prior. Therefore, we hit the road often.

It wasn't long ago that I took my family on a big swing down the Texas Independence trail. Like many, we've been to the Alamo many times but this time, we decided to go to lesser known sites and envelope ourselves in a significance pieces of history that took place 179 years ago.

Our first stop was outside of Gonzalez at Cost, Texas. Cost is the site of the first shot of the Texas war for independence from Mexico and inspired the "Come and Take It" flag in which Texans rallied around after that fateful day in October of 1835. After that, we visited the big "Houston Oak" where Sam Houston mustered his volunteers to go fight the Mexican Army at San Jacinto at the end of the revolution.

From there we traveled to Washington on the Brazos near Brenham. Washington on the Brazos is the site where delegates from the fledgling country convened and signed the Texas Declaration of Independence on March 2, 1836. The declaration, authored by George Childress, was debated and signed in a little wooden shack just up the bank from the Brazos River. It is a place of quiet contemplation and I sense that my kids realize that as they run their hands across the stone marker and explore the empty space of the convention hall.

From a distance, La Porte, Texas looks like an industrial town full of refineries. However, as you get closer to the San Jacinto battleground you start to notice immense murals depicting the final battle in the war for Texas Independence painted on the side of the petroleum storage tanks.

Then you see it.

Pointing skyward 567 feet in the air and topped with a 220-ton Texas star, the San Jacinto Monument is a fitting tribute to the battle that took place on April 21, 1836. At the battle, Sam Houston led his band of Texas volunteers against a well armed and well organized Mexican Army under the leadership Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna.

In 18 minutes the battle was over and a nation was born.

Senate passes version of 2016-2017 state budget

AUSTIN — The Texas Senate on April 14 passed its version of the 2016-2017 state budget. Because the House- and Senate-approved budgets are $1.6 billion apart, five Senate members will be appointed to a conference committee to resolve differences.

The Senate's version of the budget totals $211 billion in state and federal funds to pay for state services over the next two fiscal years. Senate Finance Committee Chair Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, who spearheaded the writing of the legislation, said the budget is one that "will keep our state strong, prosperous and compassionate."

Nelson pointed out that transportation funding under CSHB 1 would increase by almost $5 billion over the current allotment. "That includes $2.4 billion in oil and gas tax revenues approved by voters last November and $1.3 billion from ending diversions of transportation funds to other parts of the budget. The rest of the additional money is contingent on passage of a measure that would authorize a one-time shift of motor vehicle sales tax funds to the Texas Department of Transportation."

According to Senate documents, CSHB 1 also would fund border security efforts at "unprecedented levels" by sending $811 million to the Texas Department of Public Safety and associated agencies to pay for manpower, technology and training along the border. Nelson also said CSHB 1 devotes $373 million to cover caseload growth in Medicaid.

Senate passes contract bill

Senate Bill 543, legislation to strengthen oversight and management of state contracts by Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, was unanimously approved by the full Senate on April 14.

"Poor management of some contracts results in inadequate delivery of goods and services and costs taxpayers millions of dollars," Zaffirini said, adding that her bill "would improve state contracting at every stage of the process, including planning, procurement, contract formation and oversight."

SB 543, Zaffirini said, is complementary to SB 20 by Senate Finance Committee Chair Nelson, passed by the Senate last month to crack down on the contracting practices of state agencies. Both bills have come in the wake of a series of investigative stories by the Austin American-Statesman that brought to light $110 million no-bid contracts awarded by the Texas Health and Human Services Commission.

Border cameras get results

Texas Department of Public Safety on April 13 announced its law enforcement effort using a motion-detection camera array along the Texas-Mexico border, was responsible for some 29,300 apprehensions and more than 44 tons of drugs seized in 2014.

Motion-detection cameras used in "Operation Drawbridge" are placed on farms and ranches near the border. According to the DPS, when a smuggling or suspicious event is detected, an alert is sent to border county sheriffs, the U.S. Border Patrol and the DPS, who work together to arrest suspects.

Traffic camera bill moves

Senate Bill 714 by Sen. Bob Hall, R-Edgewood, legislation to ban police departments' use of red light cameras in the ticketing of motorists, was passed by the Senate Transportation Committee on April 13. The bill next will be considered by the full Senate.

Figures furnished by the state Comptroller's office suggest that banning the automated cameras statewide would result in an estimated loss of $96.5 million in general revenue in fiscal year 2016.

Jobless rate falls in March

Texas Workforce Commission on April 17 announced the state's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 4.2 percent in March, down from 4.3 percent in February.

According to the agency, Texas has not seen a rate this low since July 2007 and continues to trend below the national average of 5.5 percent.

Notably, however, the Mining and Logging sector, which includes oil and gas employment, saw a decline in March with the loss of an estimated 2,800 jobs statewide.

House approves 'carry' bill

On a vote of 96-35, the House on April 17 tentatively approved CSHB 910, allowing a person who is licensed to carry a handgun to openly carry a holstered handgun. A final vote on the bill may be taken this week.

A House-Senate conference committee would have to be named so differences between the House bill and a similar bill passed earlier by the Senate could be hashed out. A final, agreed-upon version then would go before the House and Senate for a final vote.

Man has this rain kicked in the grass and weed growth; suckers on tomatoes too. Almost afraid to mow some parts of the yard, do not want to take a chance at getting stuck and rutting the dickens out of the yard. Over at the old house the old neighbor would come over when I was stuck and pull me out with his scooter cycle. The creek rose and it's too wet to plow.

Sweet talked the Mrs. into a little trip to San Antonio and it worked. Did the Alamo again and must say I've never been to the Alamo when it was not hot. Had a good time huffing and puffing around, I finally found me a seat @ Market Square with a five dollar Budweiser. Mercy that woman can look for hours and come dragging out with one little sack... well sometimes.

The bus and street cars sure make it easy if you know how to read their schedule. Eat good too, thanks to Jim Hays who showed me where the Little Red Barn Steak house is a long time ago. Lots of Yankees there in San Antonio visiting this time of year. Met some who flew in from Michigan. Couldn't help but ask where they were from once I heard them talking.... up north. We get the same thing when we go up north.

Then the next week we went to Rockport for an overnight trip with the Harris County Seniors out of Highlands, Texas. Enjoyable trip via big bus where one could look more than while driving. Managed to see one Caracara on a power-line. A Caracara is a bird of prey and right pretty, also known as Mexican Eagle. Google knows all.

The group was scheduled to go to Corpus Christi for an aquarium tour and another tour on the carrier Lexington BUT they had a fish kill the day before and we all elected to head back up north due to the expected bad weather which came just after we got home. A fun trip with those folks and didn't smell denture crème at all.

Love those mariachi bands that walk around the restaurants and play their strings. Down south in Mexico one year in bird season we went out to eat at a restaurant which had real cloth napkins. Uncle JC from Big Spring, Texas was with us. Needless to say while at supper the band came to our table. Next thing I know they gather around me and start singing Happy Birthday. Kin folk, you gotta love them.

Till then...

COMMUNITY NEWS

NEW STUDY,

'Responsible Parties' to recover monetary damages for health injuries and property devaluation. One suit, led by attorneys Smith & Hassler, has engaged over 170 per sons who they plan to represent in court.

Young said that one of the key issues is whether the DSHS, or Texas Department of Health Services, would conduct a health study of sickness in the area. DSHS said they are preparing a "Cancer Cluster" study from existing statistics, but do not plan an on-site survey of health. Young said this is not satisfactory, because it is not specific enough, nor focused on a small enough geographic area. The data covers everything from Baytown to Humble.

Garland Report

The study made by Dr. Garland identified seven sites in the U. S. similar in toxins and geography to the SJR Waste Pits.

They needed to have similar contaminants or COCs such as dioxins and furans; they had to be a tidal basin site; sediments had to extend to a river bottom; and seafood consumption was a factor, with signage advisories.

Garland studied over 400 sites, to find 7 that met the criteria. She found that in all these sites, if the dioxins were highly concentrated, i.e. above 1 part per billion, the EPA chose to fully remove the material. For lower levels, they would accept a permanent cap, often a concrete block mat.

Garland's conclusion is that this solution must be followed, to be consistent with the EPA's own National Contingency Plan, i.e. full removal of the highest concentrations, and cap over lower dangers.

The audience contributed questions and their own experience, after the presentation.

One woman said that her medical bills were $3000/month and she felt that her health was affected by the waste pits.

Another said her son had attended San Jacinto Christian Academy in Lynchburg, which drew well water near the river, and that he had developed non-hodgkins lymphoma while he attended. Later, this ceased when he was not at the school.

Pam Banta said that one goal of the Coalition is to recover some money from the Harris County lawsuit for a mobile screening van to test residents health, and also to provide piped city water to homes that are now on wells that are possibly contaminated. The suit recovered $29.2 million.

ASK DIAMOND JIM

Can wearing a copper bracelet cure arthritis?

Arthritis is a condition that results in deterioration and loss of the joint surface cartilage, where the repair process fails to keep up with the breakdown. Copper bracelets have long been sold as a cure for arthritis. Vendors propose that the metal is absorbed through the skin and helps cartilage regeneration. But there are certain facts you should know before you rush out and buy that bracelet.

According to the Center for Hand and Upper Extremity Surgery at UAMS (University of Arkansas for Medical Services), copper deficiency is extremely rare and most regular diets provide enough copper to meet the daily requirements. Copper is a component of some of the normal cellular enzymes in most mineral rich foods, such as vegetables, potatoes, legumes (beans and peas), nuts (peanuts and pecans), grains (wheat and rye) and fruits. Supplementation is only needed in patients with serious medical conditions that affect their gastrointestinal tract and impair their ability to absorb nutrients. While it's never been proven that copper can be absorbed through the skin by wearing a bracelet, research has shown that excessive copper can result in poisoning. This can be seen after ingesting foods boiled in copper vessels or from contamination of water from corroding copper pipes, causing vomiting and, in severe cases, liver damage. In reality no modality of treatment has been shown to cure or reverse the changes of arthritis.

PORT BRIEFS

Texas Secretary of State begins Statewide "Down to Business" Tour at Bayport Terminal

New Texas Secretary of State Carlos Cascos and members of his staff began a statewide introductory tour in Houston on March 24 at the Port of Houston Authority's Bayport Container Terminal. Cascos serves as the state's 110th Secretary of State. As the new Secretary of State, Cascos was interested in learning more about how the Port of Houston contributes to international trade and the Texas economy and made the Port of Houston his first stop.

"I wanted to start here (Port of Houston) because this is the economic engine of the coast and of the state," Secretary Cascos said.

The Port Authority operates the public terminals at the Port of Houston, which is the nation's largest port in terms of foreign waterborne tonnage. The Port of Houston contributes to the creation of more than one million jobs in Texas, with an economic impact of near-ly $179 billion.

Port Commission Chairman Janiece Longoria, along with key Port Authority officials, welcomed the Secretary of State and provided a tour and a briefing.

"We were thrilled to host Secretary Cascos for a briefing and tour of Bayport, to demonstrate the technology, innovation and teamwork that makes our container terminals and other facilities the best and most productive in the nation," Chairman Longoria said.

The briefing Cascos received focused on the port's economic impact and the Port Authority's growth and expansion plans. Opportunities for trade due to expected population growth and the Panama Canal expansion also were discussed.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 2015 – On Tuesday, the Department of Energy (DOE) released the initial installment of its first ever Quadrennial Energy Review (QER). The review examines vulnerabilities in U.S. energy infrastructure and proposes policy recommendations to modernize systems, and promote economic competitiveness, energy security, and environmental responsibility. After reviewing the QER, Congressman Gene Green released the following statement:

"It's important to us that the Administration sees the need for investment in our energy infrastructure.

"The energy revolution in our country has drastically changed markets and economies in the U.S. and across the globe. Ten years ago, we faced rising costs, falling employment, and companies moving overseas, and today that couldn't be further from the truth.

"To encourage additional development and achieve the Administration's emission reductions goals, the U.S. needs to modernize its pipeline and grid network. Today, cost-competitive oil and gas are being produced in new areas of the country that are not equipped with the necessary infrastructure. Even in my home state of Texas faces pipeline and grid connectivity issues, so we know it's a problem.

"I support the Administration's work to quantify the issues facing our energy infrastructure, but rather than spending billions of federal dollars on special programs, we need to streamline and expedite permitting in a way that eliminates endless delay, while still protecting the environment.

"Mid-stream companies, like the ones in our District, and the energy sector as a whole are ready to spend billions in private capital to meet the demands of the market, but they simply cannot do that without permitting certainty. This is costing us American jobs and new revenue.

"I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Energy and Commerce Committee to find a way to take the most innovative and effective solutions from all stakeholders and crafting legislation that will make room the developing energy sector, and our growing economy."
