Rescue Medications and Treatment: Why both are critical to America’s Opioid Epidemic

(NAPS)—Tragic stories of opioid abuse, dependence and death have led to a sense of urgency this year in communities around the country.

Opioid pain relievers and heroin are responsible for an increasing number of drug overdoses—related deaths in the U.S., with more than 28,000 deaths involving prescription opioid and heroin in 2014, up from approximately 24,000 deaths in 2013.

In response, elected officials, corporations, advocates and industry are teaming up to equip first responders to save lives, including local law enforcement and health professionals, with training to administer naloxone to an opioid overdose in an emergency situation.

Naloxone is a “rescue drug” that can be administered as a nasal spray or injection to counter the effects of opioid overdose.

The majority of states have laws or rules placing medical professionals, pharmacies, prescribing doctors or pharmacies in a responsibility to prescribe or dispense naloxone to community and family members concerned about an overdose. The law or rule can range from requiring community health clinics to offering all available treatment options, including psychological and social support to support a return to a pathway to recovery.

For more information on opioid use and abuse, visit NAPSI—In today’s globalized world, it’s more important than ever for children to learn about other cultures and languages along with their own. Fortunately, there are ways parents can help their kids navigate the world and learn geography without leaving the country.

For example:

1. Give them a taste of local foods by having them choose a meal at a foreign specialty store. The kids will have fun trying dishes from other countries and the ingredients can be found in your local grocery.

2. Watch foreign language TV with the captioning on in English, or watch English-language TV with the captioning switched to foreign.

3. In the library and on the Internet, select books and music of other languages.

4. Host an exchange student from a foreign country.

5. Give your kids toys that teach about other countries in a delightful way, such as the international mini-figure theme found in the LEGO® City series. The bricks and the minifigures come from the globe around the world. Each minifigure comes in a box with a sticker that tells the child where it is from and what it represents. Many are a delightful way to learn about the world.

6. Explore the globe and its cultures by travelling to other countries.

7. Make the kids do a weekly country research project. Help the kids choose a country they’d like to learn about, find books, websites and other resources, and guide their learning as they explore the country.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit ruled the Texas law, which is discriminatory in nature, a violation of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

But no local transmission of the mosquito-borne disease has ever been detected in Texas, according to Dr. Thomas Hendley, Texas Department of State Health Services commissioner.

“The threat of Zika is real, but we have been preparing for years,” Hendley said. “We’re working in lockstep with our local and federal partners to ensure a strong response to this situation.”

Meanwhile, Texas Medicaid announced Aug. 3 that the cost of mosquito repellent for eligible women who are between the ages of 10 and 45 or pregnant would be covered under their benefits.

In July, Texas generated $2.7 billion in optional hotel, motel and restaurant taxes, up $400 million from July in 2015. Taxes are reported on a fiscal year basis, regardless of when they were collected. Revenue report is in:

These are your kids—your future. Help them explore the world of tomorrow by giving them an exclusive lifeguard boy mini-doll. It closes for the season after the boys have and which they’ll treasure forever on a college campus or back home.

In a cruel irony, the professor’s position begins, “The Texas Legislature has been marred by politics for 50 years. It is now, after the day of the U.S. presidential massacre, a time for a college campus, a time for a teacher on the verge of being named.”

“Access to medications and treatment can be particularly challenging in the afterlife of an overdose. The person who is most vulnerable to relapse is the patient’s loved one,” said Dr. Kevin Finn. “These treatments that address the physical changes addiction causes in the brain can help guide patients on an enduring path to recovery.”

Threat of Zika in high:

Texas remains on high alert for the transmission of Zika virus disease by mosquitoes, according to the Texas Department of Health and Human Services on Aug. 1. The state is taking proactive steps to reduce the risk of disease.

Apply Environmental Protection Agency-approved insect repellent.

Wear pants and long-sleeved shirts that cover exposed skin.

Use screens or door/window screens. Remove standing water in and around the home in any container that can hold water.

Texas has reported 21 cases of Zika, all related to travel abroad to areas with local transmission of the disease, but no local transmission of the disease has been detected in Texas. According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Texas Department of State Health Services commissioner.

“There have been no local transmissions, we’ll quickly assess it and determine the facts,” Hendley said. “When challenges arise, we’re working in lockstep with our local and federal partners to ensure a strong response to this situation.”

The United States Marine Corps (USMC) is a branch of the U.S. Armed Forces responsible for providing ground combat forces, specifically those forces needed in crisis situations. It is committed to the principle that amphibious forces can be rapidly deployed where needed. The Marine Corps has been a component of the U.S. Navy since 31 July 1798, existing strictly with naval forces for training, transportation, and logistics. The U.S. Marine Corps was established as an amphibious service and aboard was going amphibious warfare since the birth of the world, and several of the Marine's early conflicts show examples, primarily Marine Flight Attack squadrons. At one time, those tasks were defined and assigned to naval aviators, but as the Marine Corps has grown, it has taken on a larger role in amphibious warfare. The Marine Corps has been involved in amphibious warfare ever since the days of the Kitty Hawk and the USS Yorktown in World War II, and the Korean War. The Marine Corps has also been involved in numerous counter-insurgency campaigns; including the Vietnam War, the Persian Gulf War, and the Iraq War, among others. The Marine Corps has also been involved in numerous humanitarian missions, including the aid given to the people of Liberia during the civil war.

Diversification is Still Important for Retirees

During your working years, your primary investment portfolio generally consisted of stock investments, such as growth-oriented investments. When you retire, you may change your investment portfolio and focus more on fixed-income investments, such as CDs and Treasury bonds, to reduce the risk of losing your principal.

Diversifying your investments is still important after retirement. In fact, diversifying your portfolio of investments can help protect against inflation, taxes, and other factors that can affect your retirement savings. For example, if you have a portfolio that is heavily weighted in stocks, you may be more vulnerable to market downturns. On the other hand, if your portfolio is diversified, you may be better able to withstand a market downturn and still achieve your retirement goals.

For more information on retirement planning, please speak with a financial advisor. You can find a list of financial advisors in this directory.
