The Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Dallas office released an anticipated study last week of the Alternatives to deal with the Toxic Waste Pits in the San Jacinto River.

The study report is a 237-page volume, authored by Army Corps of Engineers from their Region and Section offices, and released in Dallas, Texas. The Corps is still in the process of setting up a public comment period until such time as the EPA's Risk Assessment Division issues a decision to proceed with a final version. The EPA's final report is not out to resolve 19 "tasks" which deal with methods of remediating the Waste Pit toxics. The study investigates the previous, current and future impacts of the Toxic Waste Pit, known as 1N, through EN, covering no further action, 1N removal or disposal, or partial or total removal from the-site. It also outlines a CN, an enhanced removal plan.

The Channelview High School Lady Falcons Volleyball team is already getting as many people as they can to come out and support them as they set their sights on the district, area and regional matchups that face them this season. Last year’s Gulf Coast Conference runner-up, the Lady Falcons will be hoping to make a run at their first district title since 2011.

Among the many returning players, junior setter Ashley Ruiz has the potential to be one of the team’s biggest hitters. She was second in the district last season behind senior Alyssa Tucker. Ruiz had 131 kills, 206 assists, 139 digs and 22 blocks.

The team’s defense will also be a strength as the Lady Falcons have returned all six seniors from last season. Senior middle banner Brooke Strother, senior libero Taylor Weimer, senior setter Samantha Grove and senior rightside hitter Sydney Magee all have the potential to be All-District players this season.

The Lady Falcons finished 30-6 in 2015 and are eager to show what they can do this season.
