AUSTIN — The Silver Alert system, a special program that the state’s law enforcement agencies use to help locate and return adults with Alzheimer’s disease, was one of the first federal laws passed since the passage of H.R. 2619, an act that authorized police local to activate a Silver Alert and not in the exercise of their family members. The Alzheimer’s Association estimates there are more than 1,000 adults with Alzheimer’s disease and other forms of dementia who wander, with the majority of them being women and 65 years old or younger. Many of these persons, who are usually female, have no prior history of wandering, and it is not uncommon for family members to notify their local law enforcement agencies to activate the alert and ask for assistance in finding their loved one.实现阿尔茨海默病患者的保护——得克萨斯州银色警报系统

Alzheimer’s patients are now protected under the States Silver Alert System

AUSTIN – State emergency preparedness coordinator for the Texas Division of Emergency Management, Craig Shive, addressed the Senate Committee on Aging on the importance of passing House Bill 2639, the Silver Alert legislation.

This past legislative session, the Silver Alert system was created as a result of legislation adopted by Texas House Bill 2639, which was signed by Governor Greg Abbott on June 12, 2017, the day after Tropical Storm Cindy made landfall in Texas on June 11. The Silver Alert system is designed to help prevent the loss of life or serious injury to those people who are at risk of wandering due to younger-onset Alzheimer’s disease.

The Silver Alert system is a voluntary system that encourages local law enforcement agencies to notify the public about a missing person with Alzheimer’s disease when there is reason to believe that the person may be at risk of wandering due to younger-onset Alzheimer’s disease.

In 1986, Peter Evans was a student in Kenya on holiday when he came across a young bull elephant  standing in a bush. He climbed over the railing, killed him in- jure. The elephant turned to face the man, and with a rather comical look on his face, stared at him for sev- eral tense moments. Peter never forget that elephant or the events of that day.

Twenty years later, Peter was walking through the Chicago Zoo with his son Cameron. When they arrived, the young bull elephant seemed distracted, one of the creatures turned and walked over to near where Peter and his son Cameron were standing. The large boy elephant stared at Pe- ter, lifted its front foot off the ground, then put it down. The elephant did not trumpet loudly, all the noise was soft glaring at the man. Remembering the moment in 1986, Peter could not think how far was the same elephant. Peter summoned up his courage, clamped over the railing, and made his way into the enclosure. He walked right up to the elephant and placed his hand on the back of the animal. The elephant trumpeted again, wrapped its trunk around Peter’s leg and slammed him against the railing, killing him instant- ly.

Probably wasn’t the same elephant. This is everyone who has heard heart-warming stories via the internet.
