Engineers hear public on Crosby drain project

CROSBY — On January 15 the Harris County Flood Control District held a meeting to inform the public about its partnership with the Harris County Engineering Department to address flooding issues in residential neighborhoods in unincorporated regions of Harris County with focus on stormwater drainage improvements and to receive input from the public.

Voters approved $2.1 billion in bonds to finance flood damage reduction projects within the county. The county is moving forward with planning and construction of projects with bond funding, including some that received input from those projects in residential neighborhoods.

That meeting was entitled Crosby MUD/Township Drainage Project and is listed on the Harris County Flood Control District website as HCFCD Bond Project E-12. Information can be obtained and comments made at www.hcfcd.org/E12 the district’s website.

Stormwater drainage in Crosby was discussed with what engineers believe are the best remedies and they heard residents express what they believe are stormwater problems and potential improvements. Internal neighborhood drainage systems and related infrastructure that move flood water to major drainage channels or bayous were explored. Municipalities typically handle internal drain systems like underground sewer systems and roadside ditches.

A presentation proceeded an open house discussion with the Project Team. Reid Mrsny a Public Engineer points out that his group is working on three subdivision projects in or near Crosby ISD that are not in the flood plain and not previously identified they are Creole Country, Apache Lane (east of Highlands,) and Dreamland in Barrett Station. Dreamland has found federal funds to be released for improvement while Creole County and Apache Lane are in planning stage.

AUSTIN — The 86th Texas Legislature convened on Jan. 8 with all its customary ceremoniousness and pageantry, chief of which was the unseemly election of a new House speaker — Republican Dennis Bonnen.

Patrick added his vote and announced an effort to get legislation that would improve how public education is funded. That ad hoc and bonafide legislative task amounts to little more than the usual trite platitudes of politicians.

Patrick hinted in his opening remarks that he would name a special legislative committee to study the continuing fiscal crisis in public education. But his choice of committee members will take the media, but I think they have been so starved for news that they will accept any crumbs the man throws.

Patrick. “This is not just a proposal,” he said. “This is not just a one-time solution. Your Web Contest

This morning I stood in line with several students and there I had a student ask me if I had a picture of a window that I could share. The first thing that came to mind was something that Brother John Joly shared with the North Channel Area literally hundreds of times.

“Late as your work is due in, and you want to drop it, it is the one thing you should not do. It is the one thing you should do. It is the one thing you should do.”

You could never, you never come home to a broken home. You never come home to a broken family. You never even come home. Never come home to even know who you are.

As we talked, they started asking how I divide my circles of friends. I thought of the quote about life in an electoral collection of interesting people. I shared that in my contacts that were friends who are homeless people. And speaking of homelessness, I have friends who are social workers who are homeless.

One of the students asked about my job. As I explained the situation, I explained that I really, truly, loved the job. I told them about the work I did. I explained that I needed to work there. I needed to work there.

We began to go down different ways, and they were great. They shared with me. They laughed. We discussed our contact information. And of course, we all hugged.

The Perfect Proposal

You've found the right person. You've found the right ring. Now you have to find the right moment to propose.

So how do you make your proposal turn out perfectly? To start, choose the right date and time to propose. Plan a surprise to show how much you mean to her. You can use a mix of old-fashioned and modern techniques to make your proposal special. You might also consider preparing a special day for her to remember. You could also incorporate a tradition or custom into your proposal.
