North Shore 54-25 over undefeated Westbrook

By Allan Jamail

BRAMMERTON, TX – Thursday, October 24 – The Mustangs remain undefeated in district play by beating the undefeated West- brook Bruins 54 – 25.

Mustang Coach Joe May mixed up his offenses using sev- eral players both rushing and passing. His passing did not fall be- cause he had two starting players and the team playing better than ever this season. His of- fensive players shined and scored numerous times.

North Shore’s offense racked up 470 total yards with 267 yards rushing and 203 yards passing. Their defense allowed the Bruins to make 300 yards and not allowing them in the end zone enough to threaten their lead.

The Harris County Flood Control District worked with a team of underground construction experts to take an initial look at the feasibility of constructing deep tunnels to convey stormwater. Underground tunnels could supplement existing bayous and creek capacity to mitigate flooding in Harris County. The team was led by Freese and Nichols with support from Terracon, WBC, Southeast Consulting Engineers, and Middleton Brown.

The study was the first phase of a multi-phased approach and focused on determining the applicability of tunneling by evaluating the hydraulic capacity of tunnels, developing schedules and cost projections, and by comparing geotechnical conditions in Harris County with other active and completed tunnel projects around the country and the world. Washington, D.C. currently has two large underground tunnels that were built in part for flood mitigation purposes. “Our analysis of the geotechnical conditions indicates that the soil and groundwater conditions in Harris County are similar to Washington, D.C. and could potentially be even better for tunneling,” said Brian Gettiner, P.E., Tunneling Services Leader at Freese and Nichols. “This is a key factor in the phase-one study as it validates that large-diameter, deep tunnels are constructable in Harris County.”

The deep tunnel concept has similarities to a 1996 Flood Control District feasibility study that considered a trenched box culvert system along the I-10 right-of-way. Unlike the 1996 study, the large-diameter tunnel concept has the potential to convey much larger flow rates and to convey the flow all the way into the Houston Ship Channel. The benefits include avoiding impacts to surface structures and property and potentially offering flood damage reduction benefits to a larger region. “Geotechnical conditions do not appear to present any remarkable or non-negotiable concerns for the large-diameter tunnels at this time,” said Scott Elmer, P.E., Engineering Division Manager at Harris County Flood Control District. “Geologic faults in Harris County may require special design considerations if crossed by a tunnel, but it is not a fatal flaw.”

Preliminary estimates prepared during the phase-one study show that a 10-mile-long, 15- and 40-foot diameter tunnel would cost approximately $1 billion and $1.5 billion, respectively, to construct.

Harris County Flood Control District funded the phase-one study through a $120,000 grant from the U.S. Economic Development Administration and an $80,000 cost-share from the Flood Control District’s 2018 Bond Program. Considerations for the next phase of the study are currently in development.

ABOUT THE HARRIS COUNTY FLOOD CONTROL DISTRICT

The Harris County Flood Control District (HCFCD) provides flood damage reduction projects that work, with appropriate regard for community and natural values. With more than 1,500 bayous and creeks totaling approximately 2,500 miles in length, the Flood Control District accomplishes its mission by devising flood damage reduction plans, implementing the plans and maintaining the infrastructure. To learn more about the Flood Control District, visit www.hcfcd.org.

The Harris County Flood Control District (HCFCD) works with partners and the community to develop a coordinated and comprehensive flood risk management strategy to provide flood damage reduction and other public benefits for Harris County and its residents. The Flood Control District’s primary sources of income are state and federal grants, sales tax revenue and bond proceeds.

Income Tax on Social Security

Dear Reader:
I retired from my work on Nov. 2, and I will receive my first Social Security benefit on Nov. 8. It is a special rule for the first year that you retire that allows you to test your tax on Social Security benefits before you have earned enough to have no other income sources when you retire. Before I retired, I earned about $30,000, which I know is more than the usual social security benefits. Because of this, I would like to answer the question that you may have: How do I calculate the tax on my Social Security benefits?

Please note that federal income tax is not due on Social Security benefits when the Social Security is the only income you have. If you are collecting Social Security benefits and you earn any other income, the IRS may require you to pay tax on Social Security benefits. The tax on Social Security benefits is withheld from your benefits if you are over the limit. If the Social Security benefits exceed the annual limit, there is no tax.

and they are very proud of their neighborhood, so it was important to us to help them recover from this storm event.”

Employees from LyondellBasell’s PO/TBA project team had made improvements to the signage earlier in September as part of the company’s 20th annual Global Care Day event, but heavy rain from Imelda on Sept. 19 caused the San Jacinto River to flood its banks and inundate the neighborhood. The signs survived, but they and the entrance area were covered in mucky debris, undoing some of the previous work of the volunteers. That made them even more determined to restore the signs and the entrance.

“We were not about to let a little water get in the way of our original commitment to the neighborhood to make improvements to the front entrance. It just delayed our work a bit,” said Gasper.

The PO/TBA team along with several neighborhood residents set to work to finish what Imelda almost destroyed. They cleaned up and reinforced the stone-work on the signs, added new sod at the entrance, replanted two large Queen Palms that were knocked down during the storm, added new landscaping, and installed flag poles behind both signs. During the event, the volunteers had a flag raising ceremony to commemorate the occasion, symbolizing the perseverance and pride of the neighborhood.

“We can’t thank LyondellBasell enough for the help they have provided our neighborhood over the years,” said Quentin Klaus, president of the Rio Villa home owner’s association. “Even though they have helped us during other flood events, this project was special because we all came together to make these improvements happen, despite the setback from the storm. Our entrance looks amazing and it’s a point of pride every time we come home.”
